DEFENSES

Credit Suisse asserts the following defenses in response to the Complaint. In asserting these defenses, Credit Suisse does not admit that it has the burden of proof on issues as to which plaintiffs properly bear the burden.

First Defense

The Complaint fails to state a claim against Credit Suisse upon which relief may be granted. Credit Suisse incorporates by reference the defenses set forth in the Defendants' February 5, 2009 Motion to Dismiss.

Second Defense

The Complaint's claims against Credit Suisse are barred because Credit Suisse, after reasonable investigation, had reasonable ground to believe and did believe at the time the Registration Statement became effective that the statements therein were true. Credit Suisse also reasonably believed, at the time Registration Statement became effective, that no material facts were omitted. Further, the Complaint's claims against Credit Suisse are barred because, even if the Registration Statement contained a false or misleading statement or omitted any material fact required to be stated or necessary to make any statement not misleading—which Credit Suisse denies—Credit Suisse did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of the untruth or omission.

Third Defense

The Complaint's claims against Credit Suisse are barred because, with respect to the portions of the Registration Statement purporting to be made on the authority of an expert, Credit Suisse had no reasonable ground to believe, and did not believe, at the time the Registration Statement became effective, that the statements therein were untrue or omitted to state a material fact required to be stated or necessary to make the statements not misleading, or that such statements did not fairly represent the expert's statement.

Fourth Defense

The Complaint's claims against Credit Suisse are barred because the allegedly omitted facts were not known or knowable in the exercise of due diligence when the Registration Statement became effective.

Fifth Defense

The Registration Statement and Prospectus contained meaningful cautionary statements that preclude Plaintiff from prevailing on its claims against Credit Suisse.

Sixth Defense

The Complaint's claims against Credit Suisse are barred because the depreciation in the value of GT Solar stock is attributable to factors other than the alleged misstatement or omission.

Seventh Defense

If the Registration Statement or Prospectus contained any false or misleading statement or omitted any material fact required to be stated or necessary to make any statement not misleading, which Credit Suisse denies, and if the lead Plaintiff or any members of the putative class were aware of that statement or omission when they purchased their shares, then such plaintiffs cannot prevail on their claims against Credit Suisse.

Eighth Defense

The claims asserted in the Complaint are barred by lack of subject matter jurisdiction to the extent the putative class includes purchasers from outside of the United States.

Ninth Defense

Plaintiffs who did not purchase GT Solar securities from Credit Suisse lack standing to assert claims against Credit Suisse.

Credit Suisse reserves the right to assert other defenses, cross-claims, and third-party claims when and if they become appropriate in this action.

WHEREFORE, Credit Suisse respectfully requests that Plaintiff take nothing by reason of its Complaint, that judgment be entered in Defendants' favor dismissing the Complaint with prejudice, that the Defendants be awarded their reasonable attorneys' fees and costs of suit, and granting such other and further relief as this Court may deem proper and just.
